SOUTH CAROLINA ARTS COMMISSION

ARTS-LETTER

VOL. 2, NO. 4 MARCH-APRIL, 1969 Sadie Jenkins Battle, Editor

CREATIVITY

gets a boost in South Carolina, with projects recently approved for Arts Commission assistance. The Spartanburg Arts Council, with SCAC funding, will launch what is hoped to be the first of an annual series of creative writing seminars. Set for April 25 and 26, the seminar is aimed principally toward fledgling S.C. writers. The Palmetto Drama Association will have Arts Commission assistance for a judge for the 14th annual High School Drama Festival, March 14-16 at Winthrop College, Rock Hill. Eleven original dramas have been submitted for the Festival. Also to receive Arts Commission funding is the South Carolina Review. This new literary journal, evolving from the Furman Review, has an editorial staff drawn from members of the Furman, Clemson and University of South Carolina Departments of English. The Review features but is not restricted to native and adopted S.C. writers.

Growth projects in arts organization personnel include two new positions: a curator of education for the Gibbes Art Gallery in Charleston, and an executive director for the Guild of S.C. Artists.

Performances earmarked for Arts Commission assistance include the Lander College Drama Department's forty presentations of "The World of Carl Sandburg", in South Carolina high schools this Spring; a concert tour of two colleges, two high schools and one elementary school by the University of South Carolina Woodwind Quintet; and a special performance for Greenville high school students of Furman Theatre Guild's "Twelfth Night". Also to be SCAC-assisted are two concerts by the Columbia Philharmonic Orchestra at Lake City Elementary School, one a free concert for school-children.

Consultant services were sought and approved for SCAC funding by the Beaufort Little Theatre.

Long-range plans approved by the Arts Commission include additional purchases for the growing State Art Collection, also the beginning of a statewide "affiliates" program.

South Carolina groups with similar proposals for Arts Commission funding are urged to contact the Commission office before the meetings in March or May.

FIRST OF ITS KIND

for the Coastal South Carolina region, the Waccamaw Arts and Crafts Guild was organized in February.

Board members include residents of Conway, Myrtle Beach and the Grand Strand area, and Georgetown.

Among first plans is an arts and crafts show, to be held at the Myrtle Beach TEC Center in late April.

A SOUND INVESTMENT

in the growth of symphonic music in our state can be made by those attending the American Symphony Orchestra League's annual conference. This year, the nationwide meet will be held in nearby Atlanta, June 4-7. You don't have to be a conductor, first-chair musician or concert manager to profit from attending.

IF YOU ATTENDED

the first statewide Governor's Conference on the Arts, in October 1966, make it a point to attend the second conference, and to advise other arts leaders in your community.

The second, expanded conference is scheduled for Saturday May 10, at U.S.C. Capstone House, Columbia.

SHOWN BELOW IS ONE OF OUR FAVORITE REACTIONS TO THE LAURENS-CLINTON CHILDREN'S CONCERT, FEB. 5, BY THE SPARTANBURG SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA (ABOVE), HENRY JANIEC, CONDUCTOR.

Pleasant View School
Gray Court S. C.
February 13, 1969

Dear Mr. Sennama
I am one of the children from Pleasant View School who came to see the concert on February 5, 1969 in the Belk Auditorium in Clinton S.C.

I enjoyed the music and sights. I especially loved the music of Carmen and My Fair Lady.

I had never seen an Orchestra in my life until that day.

Tell all the people and the conductor I said hello

Wishing you luck for ever

Yours truly,
James Jackson

CONFERENCE ON THE ARTS, (Continued)

Honor guests at the national level will be Ralph Burgard, Executive Director, Associated Councils of the Arts, New York, and Clark Mitze, Director, State and Community Operations, National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D. C.

Emphasis at the conference will be on organization of arts councils such as those already established in Spartanburg, Oconee County, Hartsville and Lancaster.

Other topics will be "Government and the Arts", "Experimental Film-making", "What's Happening Nationally", and "What's Happening Currently with the State Commission".

Arts Commission Executive Director David C. Sennema urges each South Carolina arts group to send one or more representatives.

WANTAGO TO MONACO?

That's the invitation from two South Carolina theatre groups, who'll host the Southeastern Festival of the American Community Theatre Festival competition. The nationwide winner will receive an expense-paid trip to the World Amateur Theatre Festival, in Monaco.

For further information about the Southeastern Festival, to be held in Abbeville during April, contact Donald McKellar, Box 324, Greenwood 29647, or George Settles, Box 700, Abbeville 29620.

DINNER THEATRE OPERATIONS

came under local management in Columbia, during January, and closed, awaiting new management, during the same month, in Greenville.

Both theaters began, approximately a year ago, to offer entertainment by professional actors and actresses, as well as dinner and often dancing.

Columbia Dinner Theater, formerly the Off-Broadway Dinner Theater, is now headed by Columbians Cantey Heath, John Pittard, William Cantey and Robert Husley, with Charlie Burgh as managing director.

It will be interesting to see if the public in our two largest metropolitan areas is ready to support professional theater in this format.

*****

DARLINGTON DESERVES

special praise for pioneering in new ways to awaken school-agers to the joys of music.

S.C. Department of Education Supervisor of Music Raymond O. Thigpen reports that a new string program is underway in four elementary schools in Darlington Area I, Mr. Bob Tyson, Music Supervisor. Fourth and fifth graders involved have had special preparation and musical instruments have been purchased, with the launching of the city's first string program.

at the Columbia Museum of Art will have an added impetus, through a matching grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. Purpose of the grant is to help the museum to build new audiences for music through its concert season.

Other grants in South Carolina this year have included two under the National Endowment's audience development program; at Erskine College, Due West, and at Converse College, Spartanburg.

Fourth and final concert of the Converse/National Endowment series will be on April 21; the Alma Trio, organized at the Alma Estate of Yehudi Menuhin.

Roger L. Stevens is Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, from which two officials have visited South Carolina arts activities in 1969.

One, Leonard Randolph, Assistant Director for State and Community Operations, attended the S.C. Theatre Association Conference in Charleston. Mr. Randolph's evaluation is quoted elsewhere in the ARTS-LETTER.

The newly named chairman of the Music Program Division of the National Endowment for the Arts, Dr. Walter Anderson, head of the Music Department of Antioch College, was an invited guest at the February Arts Commission meeting, held at Winthrop College in Rock Hill.

The instructor is Mrs. Mary Lou Trainor, who taught music in Pennsylvania schools for approximately five years before coming to South Carolina two years ago.

Dr. Thigpen notes further that the Darlington schools retrained fifty-one classroom teachers to follow through on days when the school's music teacher isn't there. The Darlington schools also gave fifty-one key teachers, from each grade level, a full semester's training in "bringing music alive".

ARTS SCENE, S. C.

April 1 is the new deadline, for southeastern U.S. sculptors to submit sketches for sculpture to go in the central plaza area of the University of South Carolina's new Humanities Center. Ten finalists, each winning $100, and from these, the winning sculpture, will be chosen in the $5,000 competition. For applications, contact Howard Woody, Department of Art, University of S.C., Columbia 29208.

For Wofford College's 11th annual Helmus Poetry Contest, the deadline is March 15. New contest director is Prof. James R. Gross, Wofford English Department, succeeding Prof. Kenneth D. Coates, who originated the contest in 1958.

Clemson Civic Ballet and the Piedmont Regional Ballet will be among guest companies, at the first annual Ballet Festival March 22 at Winthrop College. Festival director is Mrs. Laura Smith of Lancaster.

South Carolina writers are reminded that March 15 is the deadline for submitting entries for the South Carolina Fiction & Poetry Conference, June 16-20 at University of S.C. Mail typewritten manuscripts to the Creative Writing Committee, S.C. Tricentennial Commission, P.O. Box 1970, Columbia 29202.

Congratulations to the U.S.C. Press! Two recent publications have been selected as superior in typography and layout, in the Southern Books Competition, '68.

Bon voyage to Charlestonians taking the Carolina Art Association's first Special Art Study Tour, July 29-Aug. 18. Gibbs Art Gallery Director Francis W. Bilodeau will personally conduct the tour of European art centers.

Illustrations for 1969 Christmas cards are sought by the S. C. Association for Retarded Children. All retarded children and adults in South Carolina who are not professional artists are eligible to enter. Contact the Association, P. O. Box 1564, Columbia 29202, or visit the offices at 1517 Hampton Street.

At Hilton Head Island, the 1969 Summer School of the Arts will offer two five-week terms in art, drama and music, plus plays, concerts and art exhibits. Details are available from Director, Summer School of the Arts, University of South Carolina, Columbia 29208.

COLUMBIA HAS IT:

the United States' oldest theatre in continuous operation. Town Theatre, whose fifty eventful years have been under such illustrious directors as Fred Coe and Delbert Mann, marks its Golden Anniversary with a gala opening of "Oliver!", March 21.

Climaxing the anniversary weekend, on March 23 Town Theatre and the State-Record Company will be joint hosts for a season members' bonus; a guest lecture by Sir Tyrone Guthrie (Tyrone Guthrie Theatre, Minneapolis), famed on both sides of the Atlantic for his theatrical achievements.

SCHOOL ART

and improving the school art program will be the topic of guest speaker Mr. Baylor Nichols, State Supervisor of Art for the state of Virginia, at the SCAEA Spring meeting.

The newly merged South Carolina Art Education Association will meet on March 21, in the Columbia Museum of Art auditorium. Hosts will be the U.S.C. Department of Art and the University of South Carolina.

Interested non-members are invited to attend, and join elementary and secondary art teachers from over the state, in hearing the Virginia State Supervisor of Art.

GROWING:

the enrollment in Gibbes Art Gallery School. Four additional faculty members joined first-term instructors for the eleven second-term classes, with more than 100 children and adults enrolled. Still more faculty members, and more studio and art lecture courses were added, for the Spring term beginning March 10. Congratulations!

A TALENT POOL

of future symphony orchestra players is the objective of a pilot program inaugurated last year by the South Carolina Arts Commission and the Brevard Music Center. Highly successful, the program will be repeated for 1969, with one player chosen from each of the state's regular symphony orchestras, for a summer of study at Brevard Music Center.

Last summer's scholarships were awarded to Miss Karen Jones, 'cellist with the Greenville Symphony; Miss Brenda Bradshaw, 'cellist with the Spartanburg Symphony; Mark Cedel, violist with the Charleston Symphony; Miss Diana Davis, oboist with the Myrtle Beach Symphony By-the-Sea; Gerard Wachowski, bassist with the Florence Symphony and Miss Debbie Rhodes, 'cellist from the Columbia Philharmonic Orchestra.

With half the scholarship funded by the Arts Commission, the remaining cost was covered either by the individual or the orchestra.

For details of scholarship competitions, community symphony orchestra players should contact their conductor, or Mr. Henry Janiec, Director of Brevard Music Center, Box 349, Converse College, Spartanburg 29301.

HIGH PRAISE

went to participants in the second South Carolina Theatre Association Conference, from a National Endowment for the Arts official.

Leonard Randolph, Assistant Director for State and Community Operations, attended the conference/workshop, and has graciously allowed the Arts Commission to quote from his evaluation:

ACTRESS MILDRED DUNNOCK, CONSULTANT FOR THE SCTA CONFERENCE FEB. 14-16 IN CHARLESTON, GIVES POINTERS TO BEAUFORT LITTLE THEATRE ACTOR BOB HITE.

"Extraordinarily well done" was the way Mr. Randolph described the special performance by the Footlight Players in the Dock Street Theatre, of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Mr. Randolph observed workshop sessions by Mildred Dunnock and Norris Houghton, with scenes chosen from the following plays: Anastasia, by the Footlight Players, Charleston; The Imaginary Invalid by the Clemson College Players; Barefoot in the Park by the Beaufort Little Theatre; The Lion in Winter by Spartanburg Little Theatre; Death of a Salesman by the Greenwood Little Theatre and Inherit the Wind by the Abbeville Community Theatre.

In his evaluation, Mr. Randolph said, "...the overall quality was high -- quite a bit above the average for non-professional performance, and in the case of the actors' work with Miss Dunnock, far more responsive and effective than anyone could reasonably anticipate".

He summarized: "As an effort to provide professional guidance for a vital part of the arts scene in South Carolina, the conference was highly successful".

The Arts Commission office has available a fuller transcript of Mr. Randolph's evaluation (see previous column), also a prototype community theatre season report and audit report distributed at the SCTA meeting. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Arts Commission in Columbia.

TO STAY ALIVE

and vital, the theatre most continue to reach out, Arts Commission Executive Director David C. Sennema said, in paraphrasing comments by SCTA Conference consultants.

"The second annual conference of the South Carolina Theatre Association was one which will live long in the memories of those who attended".

"Norris Houghton charmed his audiences and Mildred Dunnock captivated hers", Mr. Sennema continued, "as they combined to bring a fresh, optimistic, constructive view of what theatre should be to the Conference delegates.

Nearly 150 delegates from all parts of the state came early, left late and hung on the words of Miss Dunnock and Mr. Houghton."

(Actress Mildred Dunnock, star of Death of a Salesman on Broadway and in the film, and director-scene designer Norris Houghton, came as consultants to the workshop, with S.C. Arts Commission assistance.)

Mr. Sennema points out: "In the closing sessions on Sunday morning, Mr. Houghton and Miss Dunnock left South Carolina theatre people with a bit of a challenge; the gist of which was that we shouldn't be content with what we are doing for any length of time. In order to stay alive and vital, the theatre must continue to reach out.

One of the reasons for the existence of the South Carolina Arts Commission is so that theatre may reach out. We consider the recent conference to have been a great success and we're pleased to have been a part of it. We look forward to continuing to work with the South Carolina Theatre Association and individual theatre organizations within the State."

CHARLESTON

artist Bill Buggel, Technical Director of the Gibbes Art Gallery, and Sam Hughes, South Carolina artist now living in San Francisco, were $100 award winners, in the 23rd annual South Carolina Artists Exhibition, at Gibbes Art Gallery through March 23.

Receiving $50 awards, from the Saul Alexander Foundation, were Jo Holmes and Jane R. Ruark of Columbia, with honorable mention going to James Moore of Charleston and Boyd Saunders of Columbia.

Mrs. Ruark's watercolor, and works of two other Columbians, Truman Teed and Robert J. Mills, Jr., were purchased by the Home Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Juror for the show, which attracted 305 entries, was Hiram Williams, noted American artist and head of the Graduate Department, University of Florida.

FOUND, WITH SCAC FUNDING:

new Florence Museum Director Eugene C. Waddell. He succeeds Miss Virginia Ravenel, who resigned after ten years as membership secretary, acting director, then director, and will now serve as Director of Public Relations.

Waddell is a graduate of the College of Charleston, where he was a student assistant for the Department of Fine Arts, and, in his senior year, editor of the literary magazine. Two years' post-college army service included duty in Korea for thirteen months.

The Florence native's boyhood scouting activities in Indian lore led to archeology. Conducting a survey for the Charleston Museum, Waddell located over two hundred sites in twenty seven South Carolina counties. Since the survey, three of his anthropological papers have been published in professional journals.

The Florence Museum availed itself of SCAC Arts Organization Personnel Development program funds, in securing this promising young director.

YOUR TALENT IS SHOWING

Two South Carolina art instructors' works have been selected by the Smithsonian Institution for traveling exhibits: "Vestal Sentinel", sculpture by Howard Woody, University Department of Art professor, and a charcoal drawing by Limestone College art instructor James Andrews Cox.

Another charcoal drawing by Mr. Cox was chosen for the Bi-Annual Drawing Exhibit at Newport News Va.

Columbia artist Nell Murray Lafaye's painting, "Prickly Pear", was chosen for printing on the cover of the Mainstreams '68 catalogue, for the Marietta College, Ohio International Competitive Art and Sculpture Exhibition. Over 1,400 entries had been submitted from 44 states, the District of Columbia and five foreign countries, for Mainstreams '68, made possible with the support of the National Endowment for the Arts and the Ohio Arts Council.

Mrs. Jeanet Dreskin, director of the Art School, Greenville County Museum of Art, won the $200 Kenan Memorial Award, in the 30th Annual American Contemporary Exhibition in the Society of the Four Arts, Palm Beach, Fla. Her winning polymer painting, "Vastitude V", is one of a series from which "Vastitude III" was chosen for the South Carolina Arts Commission State Art Collection.

Mrs. Bette Lee Coburn, a teacher at the Greenville Museum Art School, has been accepted in the National Association of Women Artists, a limited group whose members may submit entries to association art exhibits over the world. Mrs. Coburn's painting, "Ritual", was displayed in the international exposition at Municipal Casino, Cannes, in February. The Cannes show will be exhibited at Chateau de la Napoule, France, in July, then at the London Public Art Museum in London, Ontario, during October.

Allendale native Jasper Johns, internationally famed for his flags, numerals and targets, has given a major gift to the permanent collection of the Greenville County Museum of Art. Johns has presented his personal set of ten black and gray lithographs, "Numerals". To be on view in late March, the set is described by Museum Director Jack A. Morris, Jr. as showing Johns' "approach to the infinite variation possibilities of the commonplace".
